Gordon the Goose has been a familiar sight for many years and seems to get along with the ducks and, as can be seen in the picture, treats children and passers-by for the nearby bus shelter and is never far from the water.

This corner of Nayland is so different to most villages. Known as Nags Corner the street and the entrance to the village. It is a narrow lane and the houses are built on the edge of the river. Most days there are only a few people walking along this path and it was a popular spot for the fishermen who came from far and wide to fish in the river. Now the houses are gone by, few people walk along this path and it was a popular spot for the fishermen who came from far and wide to fish in the river. The bridge on Puffin Piece near the Anchor Inn in the North Sea. This view of the bridge was taken in the 1930s and is the same scene from the nearby North Sea coast. The bridge was built in the 1850s and was replaced in the 1930s. The bridge stands on the old road to the village, before the bridge was built in the late 1930s, and was named after the Anchor Inn.

To celebrate the Millennium an oak tree was planted on Puffin Piece in 1999. This tree is now 19 years old and is the only oak tree of its kind in the area. It was planted by the Anchor Inn and is now the only oak tree of its kind in the area. It was planted by the Anchor Inn and is now the only oak tree of its kind in the area.
